

PRIVACY POLICY

CAL LAW APC | Effective Date: September 28, 2026

CAL LAW APC respects your privacy. This Privacy Policy explains how we collect, use, and disclose information obtained through callawapc.com and through communications with our office.

Information We Collect

We may collect information that you voluntarily provide to us, including your name, email address, telephone number, mailing address, information concerning your employment or potential legal matter, and other information you choose to provide through a contact form, email, text message, telephone call, chat, or other communication.

Telephone calls to our office may be answered or assisted by an artificial-intelligence-based telephone system. Calls may be recorded or transcribed after appropriate notice is provided to the caller.

We may also automatically collect limited technical information when you visit the website, such as your IP address, browser or device information, referring website, pages visited, and similar usage information. We may use cookies or similar technologies for website functionality, security, analytics, and performance.

How We Use Information

We may use information collected through the website or communications with our office to:

- respond to inquiries and evaluate requests for legal services;
- communicate with prospective and existing clients;
- operate, maintain, secure, and improve our website, telephone systems, and services;
- maintain business and administrative records; and
- comply with applicable legal and professional obligations.

Submitting information through this website, email, text message, chat, telephone, or an intake form does not by itself create an attorney-client relationship.

Service Providers and Disclosure of Information

We do not sell or rent personal information.

We use third-party service providers to operate our law practice and communications systems. These may include website hosting providers, email providers, telephone and artificial-intelligence communication providers, cloud storage providers, website analytics providers, and other technology and professional service providers. Information you provide to us may therefore be transmitted to, processed by, or stored by these providers as necessary to provide their services to us.

We may also disclose information to attorneys, employees, contractors, consultants, and other service providers as reasonably necessary to operate our law practice.

We may disclose information when required or permitted by law, court order, subpoena, or other legal process, or when reasonably necessary to protect our rights, security, or operations. Any disclosure by CAL LAW APC remains subject to applicable professional duties, including duties of confidentiality and attorney-client privilege where applicable.

Cookies and Online Tracking

The website may use cookies and similar technologies for functionality, security, analytics, and performance. Third-party service providers used in connection with the website may collect information concerning your interaction with the website.

Our website does not currently respond differently to browser "Do Not Track" signals. You may be able to control cookies or other tracking technologies through your browser settings.

Reviewing or Correcting Your Information

You may contact us to request that we review or correct personal information you have provided to us. We may need to verify your identity before acting on a request.

Third-Party Websites

This website may contain links to websites operated by third parties. CAL LAW APC is not responsible for the privacy practices of those websites. You should review the privacy policy of any third-party website you visit.

Changes to This Privacy Policy

We may update this Privacy Policy from time to time. Material changes will be reflected by updating the effective date or posting an appropriate notice on the website.
